

What is a Dollar

"Your dollar is your friend."
But there are GOOD and BAD friends.
If you don't get the dollar's worth it is a BAD friend.
If you get a full dollar's worth it is a GOOD friend.
If you get OVER a dollar's worth the dollar is a VERY good friend.
If you get a dollar-and-a-half's worth, the dollar is a VERY DEAR friend.
If you get TWO dollars' worth and over, your dollar is your VERY BEST friend.

ROCK-BOTTOM BRIDGE SITE FAVORED BY GILA VISITORS

Local Businessmen Accompany Supervisors On Tour Toward Gila Bend; Two Sites and Some New Road Inspected

Covering 173 miles of new road, old road and no road at all, and inspecting two bridge sites, the committee of business men who had been named to search out a route that would connect Phoenix with the rapidly developing Ajo copper country, yesterday made its preliminary survey and settled in its own mind which of the two Gila crossings is the most feasible for a permanent bridge.

At five-thirty in the morning the three autos left Phoenix. In the first car were Frank Luke, W. K. Bowen and Warren Peterson, the board of supervisors, clerk of the board of supervisors, C. L. Standage, and County Engineer Harold Bargeham.

In the second car were Warren McArthur, a gentleman known as Mr. Turtle, but better known as Harry Trille, Lester Byron, A. F. Harter, representing the city engineering force and B. M. Atwood of the state engineer's office. The third car contained Dr. J. C. Norton, Dr. John Dennet, Jr., Harry Diehl, Will Pinner, Dwight B. Heard and Percy Keen.

At Arlington the cars were joined by a guide car containing John Montgomery, the daddy of the Gila bridge, and Dan Millett. Through the enterprise of these gentlemen a good road had been opened up to the first bridge site about twenty-one miles south of Arlington, where the autos were left.

Here the party was taken across the Gila in two four-horse teams of the Flower Pot Ranch company. The bridge site which had been staked out and which had rock on only the north side was inspected by the visitors and the crossing, including necessary approaches, found to be about 2,900 feet long.

On reaching the south side of the river the inspecting party was met by a bunch of public spirited citizens of Gila Bend led by Dr. L. H. Richards, Dan Noonan and Messrs. Johnson, Logan and Stout. The committee loaded the visitors into autos for the trip to the second bridge site over a road part of which they had constructed for the occasion.

Chuck-wagon Grub
The first site inspected is about ten miles northeast of Gila Bend; the second site is about four miles southwest of Gila Bend. At the second site the party gathered around the chuck wagon of the Gila Cattle Company and enjoyed a genuine western feed including barbecued meat and all the most approved "fixins" including coffee and lemonade.

The Better Site

Re-inforced by the ample and wholesome grub the party inspected the second bridge site, one admirably adapted by nature for the purpose, with solid ledge rock on both sides. That there might be no question as to the distance between the bed rock abutments, John Montgomery and Dan Noonan, in airy costumes and with sylph like grace, waded and measured a distance of 722 feet from rock to rock, across the stream. They went 140 feet further for good measure, making the actual length of the bridge required to fit this site less than 300 feet.

On the north side no approach will be necessary while on the south about nine hundred feet of approach will be required, practically on rock bottom.

Government Data

The government has had extensive soundings made at this point under W. S. Jones who had charge of similar work at the Roosevelt dam and the Panama Canal. Two complete sets of soundings have been made showing a depth to bed rock of from 21 feet to 55 feet 10 inches.

From the north end of the proposed bridge, at this point only about fifteen miles of road through comparatively easy roadmaking country would be necessary to connect the bridge with the Yuma-Phoenix state and transcontinental highway. This would make the distance to Ajo by this route only about 115 miles, practically the same distance as to Globe.

Survey to be Made

It was the unanimous opinion of the visiting party including the engineers that the second site inspected, was the most practical and desirable, and the board of supervisors indicated that it would have a thorough engineering investigation including a preliminary survey of the connecting road made at an early date.

Prosperous Lower Valley

The lower end of the valley comprising Liberty, Buckeye, Palo Verde and Arlington never looked better, there were fine fields of grain and alfalfa, countless herds of high grade cattle, sheep and hogs in evidence everywhere. These locations have looked to Phoenix for markets for their products they welcome however, better communications with their neighbors in the Ajo country. The party passed one bunch of yearlings 225 in number for shipment at Gila Bend for Eastern markets. The proposed road and bridge connecting the lower end of the valley opens a gateway for communications with a large territory, needing the products of this locality, not to speak of trade relations with Phoenix merchants, for the better development of the resources of this part of the state.

WOODS IS BUSY BUT CITY DADS SIMPLY LISTEN

Overlooking the arrangement entered into by various members of the city commission that the city fathers await the return to the city of Mayor Corbstein before taking action looking to the amendment of ordinance 99 and the outlining of a general policy with relation to the suppression and control of vice in this city, Commissioner Frank Woods yesterday morning at a recess session of the city commission entered into a denunciation of the police department for what he termed its laxity in enforcing the law. He wanted the city "cleaned up" at once and insisted that the commission should hold the chief of police to strict accountability.

The remarks of Commissioner Woods provoked no discussion on the part of the commissioners and a resolution was finally adopted at the suggestion of Commissioner Richey directing enforcement of the law as it now stands. This will not result in curtailing the efforts of the commission to arrive at a definite program as soon as it is possible to have all members present.

An effort was made to have Robert Hunt restored to the police force as a motorcycle officer, but Manager Craig explained that he had been removed from the force for cause, which was finally admitted at the suggestion of Commissioner Richey directing enforcement of the law as it now stands. This will not result in curtailing the efforts of the commission to arrive at a definite program as soon as it is possible to have all members present.

It was explained by some of the commissioners after the meeting that they are fully aware of the conditions that obtain in this city at present, but they are of the opinion that it will be impossible to direct a "clean-up" of the city until there are ordinances covering the situation and under which it will be possible to secure convictions. An example of this was manifest in the city court yesterday afternoon when it was necessary to discharge a woman against whom there was an array of witnesses and testimony that would probably have convicted her in any other city court than that of Phoenix. Citizens generally are coming to a realization that there must be proper city ordinances both with respect to vice and to gambling before it will be possible for the police to act effectively. Chief of Police Briscoe stated last evening that he and his department were ready to act the minute they had the backing of adequate ordinances.

On the ground that a principal cannot be convicted on the uncorroborated testimony of an accomplice, the case of Fred Gardiner charged with procuring the false registration of Savannah Robinson was dismissed from Judge De Souza's court yesterday.

The Robinson girl and Adeline Starr, another colored girl were the only witnesses and the latter proved of little value to the state since her testimony was confined to what had been told her by Savannah.

As she told of her meeting with Gardiner at the Clover club, Savannah did not halt in her testimony but when her age was the issue, she was not as ready to respond to the curt questions of the attorneys.

On the witness stand Adeline casually remarked "we all tell stories when we get a chance," and her statements were taken for their worth. She said that she was twenty-three and "that Gardiner had asked her to register just as he had Savannah but as for herself—she "didn't care who came in or who went out."

Judge W. L. Barnum then moved to dismiss on the ground that Savannah was an accomplice and that Gardiner could not be convicted on her uncorroborated testimony.

Assistant City Attorney J. L. Nelson on whose complaint Gardiner was arrested, was associated with Assistant County Attorney Leon S. Jacobs in the case, argued against the motion to dismiss declaring that corroboration was not necessary.

Judge De Souza after taking the matter under advisement dismissed.

GARNETT KING
Gen. Pass. Agt., El Paso

the weak-chinned attitude of local people toward the guard, Sergeant Ned Raley, son of Rev. Edward Raley, general secretary of the Arizona Sunday School Association, authorized statements regarding conditions on this border last night. Sergeant Raley returned from Douglas on special orders from the adjutant general and on a mission the real nature of which is not to be learned.

"Instead of writing and encouraging the boys, Phoenix parents and best girls are continually wishing the soldiers would come home. They are an actual menace to the peace of mind of the guard, and the fact there has been practically no trouble with the organization is a tribute to the strength of mind and devotion of its members."

"I am assigned to Company A for rations and the company assigns itself to me for cigarettes. At any rate, the guys look expectantly at me after each meal."

Raley found life in camp very pleasant. In fact, he is one of the very few who have not been longing to return home. There are some flies in the ointment, however.

"Of course, now that I'm unhooked from the border, it won't appear that I am hinting, but if you really want to show your appreciation of the honor the boys are bringing to their families, you can make a practice of sending something whenever you feel generous. A case of imported cigars, a sleeping bag with camel-hair blankets, or a case of good wine or any such trifle would be appreciated. Seriously, though, tobacco and such little luxuries are very acceptable. There is a scarcity of reading matter, too. There ought to be some way of sending magazines by the thousand to the camp."

In a letter written by Raley to his father, and reaching here the day before he arrived, is a paragraph with a sermon in it.

"What is the matter with that bunch of stuff back in Phoenix? Here is the company down here struggling for enough men to pass the government requirements, when we should be able to pick and choose from a thousand applicants. Every one of that bunch just graduating should be compelled by their parents to enlist and come down here. It seems to me it is much better to learn how to be of some use to themselves and the nation than to learn to play pool and to patronize the nickel struggles. Those parents who won't let the kids go ought to be fined and jailed or get a good cussing-out or something. If they could see this regular army sergeant who is here with us as instructor (Sergeant Landreth) and compare their flabby cotton artist of baby boys with him I think their eyes would be opened. Some of us are learning fast and all of that, but the way he can

HUNDRED SCOTS AT EMPIRE DAY PICNIC

It was a Scottish night. The Caledonian Society was out in force at the annual picnic of the society on "Empire Day," the queen's birthday, May 24. The gentlemen members of the society were clad in the distinctive garb of the land of

"Brown heath and shaggy wood, Land of the mountain and the flood."

More than a hundred members of the society and their guests had assembled to take part in the festivities and to enjoy a brief but delightful program which carried them back to old Scotland.

The opening number was a song by Mrs. Tenney. "We are all Scottish here." The address of the evening was delivered by Justice H. D. Ross of the supreme court. "The Lady Farmer," was the title of select reading by Mrs. Duncan. The Highland Fling was delineated by Miss MacDonald. "The Auld Sark Sleeve," was the title of select reading by Mrs. Jamison.

After an address by Mr. Bell an old Scotch song was delightfully sung by Miss Forsythe. The program was concluded by a bagpipe solo, "The Cock of the North."

As Phoenix grows the Caledonian society grows with it for Scotland steadily contributes its share to the increasing population. A Scotchman is less likely than men of many other nationalities to forget the land of his nativity and for that reason the Caledonian Society is one of increasing vitality.

MORE SENTENCES COMMUTED

[Republican A. P. Leased Wire]

DUBLIN, May 24.—It was officially announced today that in addition to the sentence of death imposed on Jeremiah C. Lynch a similar sentence was imposed upon Peter Callaghan, but that this sentence was commuted to five years penal servitude. A number of other persons also were sentenced to various terms of imprisonment.

The court martial opened today in private on the case of John MacNeill, president of the Sinn Fein volunteers who formerly was a servant in the four courts of Dublin and now is a professor in the Irish university.

HOW CITY PERMITS USE OF WOOD LATH

In Remodeling, Wood Lath Can Be Used by Special Permit; New Work Must be of Metal Lath

There seems to be some confusion regarding the use of wood lath and metal lath within the fire limits of the city.

The new building ordinance prohibits the use of wood lath on all new work located in the fire limits.

On alterations and the remodeling of existing buildings, however, the ordinance grants the building inspector the power to dispense with the strict enforcement of the provisions of the ordinance upon application therefore in writing. But no deviation can be allowed unless a special permit be issued therefore, and a public record kept on file in the office of the building inspector.

Under the former building ordinance permits were occasionally granted for the use of wood lath for alteration work in old buildings, when the re-
